We are authorized to announce

Of Butler county, as a candidate for the office of Judge of the Court of Appeals from the Second Appellate District of Kentucky, subject to the action of the Republican party.

Democratic Ticket.

FOR COUNTY JUDGE.

We are authorized to announce
E. T. WILLIAMS
As the Democratic nominee for County Judge of Ohio county. Election,
November 6, 1894.

GIVE US BRICK WALKS.

COMMON SENSE calls for brick walks.

NECESSITY demands brick walks.

WHAT'S the matter with the rack pile?

ECONOMY demands the laying of brick walks.

COL. W. O. BRADLEY and Hon.

John W. Lewis will speak at the Leitchfield Convention Wednesday.

Too many teachers cease hustling as soon as the contract is "signed up" by the Trustees. Is that true in your case?

It is a foregone conclusion that the Hon. W. O. Bradley will lead the Republican column in the Gubernatorial race of 1895.

EVERY teacher worthy of the name is glad when the time for the County

Institution arrives. What are your feelings about the matter?

THE Commercial Club meets tonight to discuss a very live and important question, that of brick walks.

A full attendance is desired.

When the people returned the Democratic party to power in 1892 they were merely sowing to the wind. They are now reaping the whirlwind.

EVERY public interest demands that the Board of Trustees require the laying of brick walks. That is vim, that is energy, that is progress. Nothing else will suffice.

It is useless to wait until everybody is as rich as he wishes or until all are willing to build brick walks. If every citizen of Hartford were as rich as Croesus some one would still oppose the laying of brick walks in the town.

THE rush for schools, which has been on in earnest for some weeks, is now somewhat subsided, the majority of teachers having secured situations.

There are, however, enough left without schools to make life interesting to the Trustees.

THE Commercial Club meets tonight and every member should be present. A subject of vital interest to every citizen of the town will be discussed. The question is whether or not we shall have brick walks. Come out and say your say.

THE woman suffragists always have a pet argument in favor of their whims, on the presumption that if women could vote they would destroy the saloon. They should now tell the world what they would do with the saloon's half-brother, the Anarchist.

THE benefit which brick walks would be to the town is simply incalculable. They will enhance the value of property, they will give our people better service, they will be cheaper in the long run, they will do more than anything else to make the town presentable to strangers and visitors from abroad.

EVERY good citizen should be interested in making the mission of the Commercial Club a success. Such an organization is worth more to a town than it is possible to estimate.

The Club meets to-night and every citizen interested in the welfare of the town should be in attendance. If you can speak, speak. If you cannot speak you can at least aid the cause by your presence.

JUDGE GUFFY goes right along carrying the instructions of the counties for his nomination for Judge of the Court of Appeals.

ANARCHY is not alone the direct enemy of government, it is the enemy of labor as well, though pretending to be its benefactor.

A FEW of the L. & N. employes went out on a strike at Louisville Monday on the order of Cesar Debs, but their places have been filled, the strike there is ended and the strikers have been begging their old places back in vain.

AMONG all the wild, loud-mouthed, lawless mobs doing violence over the country, is not one grain of patriotism. Anarchy, not love of country is the mark which distinguishes these men from their fellow citizens, who respect law and good order.

THE greater part of the riotous and turbulent strikers are foreign Anarchists, who have nothing in common with America nor Americans.
The only efficient remedy is the suppression of those already here and the refusal to allow any more such to come.

WHAT if the brick walks do cost a little more and what if they do put property holders to inconvenience, some of them great inconvenience? Is it not better that a few suffer rather than the many? And do not the few have the advantages as well as the many? And is not the property of the few that is enhanced in value?

THERE is perhaps no county in this part of the State better equipped with school furniture and apparatus than is Ohio county, and yet there is much work to be done. No Trustee should cease his efforts until his school house is furnished with patent seats and other modern conveniences.

THE program for the Institute means just what it says when it says "paper." Parties to whom such work is assigned should prepare something to be read and not humiliate themselves and impose upon their fellows by coming up with some frivolous excuse about lack of time and preparation.
If unprepared nine out of every ten will have no excuse.

MONTGOMERY and Murray had a monkey and parrot time of it at Lechanon last week. The crowd went wild for Murray and refused to hear Montgomery, until the Cloverport man came forward and reproved them and told them that surely they would listen to their Congressmen speak. The indications are that things will grow exceedingly hot by the time the Primary occurs, August 4th.

The Louisville evening Post of Wednesday heads its news columns with the Stars and Stripes and quotes these beautiful lines so dear to every patriot's heart:

"When Freedom from her mountain height,
Unfurled her banner to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there."

It is indeed a good sign to see such manifestations of devotion to Old Glory coming from so great a Democratic sheet.

THIS country is coming to be free for everybody else but law-abiding Americans. That class is made to suffer the insults and inconveniences of a set of red mouthed Anarchists who will neither work themselves nor allow others to work. If this is to continue "the land of the free" it is growing high time our own law-abiding citizens, both native and foreign born, should be protected in the enjoyment of their bonated liberty and against the high-handed methods of the enemies of our institutions who abuse the privilege of living in our country by attempting its destruction.

THERE are yet in the teachers' ranks a few figureheads who persist in lowering the dignity of the profession and bringing it into reproach by teaching for less than the "public money." The intention of the law is that every cent of the fund expended by the State shall be for the hire of teachers and for that only. Yet there are those who in order to persuade a Board of Trustees to employ them will pay a part of the district debt edness, furnish the fuel, buckets and brooms, and perhaps clothe and feed the children and do the patching, all for the "public money." The class of cattle who do these things is, we are glad to say, rapidly passing out of the profession they so woefully misrepresent.

The Kentucky Leader has a knack of being on the right side of most questions. Listen to what it has to say of the Republican nomination in the Fourth Congressional District:

"The Republicans of the Fourth District did a good day's work, and one they will have occasion to be proud of when they nominated Hon. John W.
Lewis for Congress.
John W. Lewis is no figurehead. He is a great brainy man and one of the most aggressive fighters that ever did battle for party principles. His thrilling eloquence has been heard on every stump in the State, and woe to the Democrat who attempted to meet him in debate.
The good Republicans of the Fourth District are to be congratulated that they did so wisely in choosing for their leader one of the most noted party men in the State and all honor and glory to John W. Lewis for accepting the Congressional nomination.
Republicans of other districts should emulate the example of their brethren in the Fourth, and put forward their best party man for Congress this fall."

If the Republican party was responsible for the strikes and the Homesstead riots of 1892 as asserted by the Democratic politicians, does it not follow by like reasoning that the Democratic party is responsible for the present strikes and recent bloodshed? It would seem so. Is this charge true or were the Democrats merely jesting in 1892? Which horn will you take?

MEN talk about the power of Wall Street and the power of the money king and the power of capital, but there is no other such power on earth as that which enables one man like a Debs or a Sovereign to call out a million and a half of men from honest labor to idle lawlessness and stop the machinery of the mightiest domestic commerce of the world. The combined power of all trusts and all monopolies is a pigmy beside such a giant.

How many teachers ever prepare for the Institute by giving the program careful and systematic study?
Would it not be well to prepare for the County Institute with as much care and zeal as for the examination?
Suppose you try the plan and spend next week in studying the various subjects offered in the program. If all the teachers of the county would do that the meeting of week after next would be the most profitable ever held in these parts.

THE past week has been one of the most intense excitement in and around the cities suffering the great railroad strike. Chicago has been the great center of interest, although grave complications have arisen in other cities. The whole trouble came up over the quarrel between the Pullman Car Company and their employees, the A. R. U. striking through "sympathy." The men would neither work themselves, according to their agreement with the railroad companies, nor would they allow others to work. Whoever attempted to move a train was in danger of death or great bodily harm. Trains were ditched, engines "killed," cars burned and every manner of lawlessness committed. On Saturday there was a conflict between the rioting strikers and the soldiers in which the mob came out second best and several men were killed and many were wounded.
Sunday night President Cleveland issued a proclamation and Uncle Sam's blue coats have since been taking a hand.

So far as we are informed the instructed vote in the race for Judge of the Court of Appeals in the Second District is as follows:
For Feland Davies, 16; Todd, 14; Allen, 12; total 40. For Guffy: Butler, 13;
McLean, 5; Meade, 4; Edmonson, 1; Cumberland, 9; Breckearidge, 12; Grayson, 12; Monroe, 11; Ohio, 16; total 88. Simpson county sent her delegates unrepresented. The total vote is 197—necessary to a choice, 99.
So that Judge Guffy lacks only 11 votes now of the nomination. Mublenburg with 17 votes holds her Convention to-morrow and if she instructs for Guffy, as she should, and no doubt will do, that will settle the matter finally, besides he has a very flattering chance, in fact, almost a certainty of carrying several of the counties yet to hold their Conventions.
In other words the Owensboro Messenger and the Democratic press and politicians generally, throughout the district had as well understand a thing or two now as later and submit timely to the nomination of the man from old Butler and finally to his election in November.

Base Ball.
Say what you will, for or against it, revile it or praise it, the great national game continues its hold upon the people. The large crowd that attended the game here Saturday evening fully attests the high esteem in which the game is held.

The Ceralvo boys came up Saturday to play the home club and carried off another scalp.

The game was full of interest, but the large score shows much bad playing on both sides. The Hartford boys started off in the game with a bound and for the first few innings played like champions, but about the sixth inning they went to pieces and never could regain their lost ground. Score, Ceralvo, 31; Hartford, 27. Umpire, Hinyard.

Arrangements will no doubt be made for another game with Ceralvo at an early date.

An effort has been made to have the Central City to play here on the 21st, but so far no permanent arrangements have been made.

The Court House Ring defeated the Seven Troughs again last Thursday in

Mr. H. B. Stith, who has been connected with this office for the past two months, left Wednesday for Hopkinsville, where he has accepted a position in the office of the Republican Banner. Mr. Stith is a clever, agreeable gentleman, a good printer and is in every way worthy of the confidence reposed. We wish him success.

The people of Hartford gladly welcome back Mrs. Zelma Gregory and family, who have recently moved here from Texas. She with her two accomplished daughters, Misses Annie and Fannie, will be quite an addition to the society of the town already noted for its worthy matrons and beautiful girls. Mrs. Gregory has purchased the Hill property on Union Street.

Considerable excitement has existed for the past two weeks in the Prentiss and Cromwell country over the report that a mad dog had passed through, biting several dogs and some stock. Several parties killed their canines that were so unfortunate as to be bitten but one good old farmer so loved his dog that instead of killing it he tied it to a tree in the yard near the fence. His dogship jumped the fence but his rope was too short and he strangled to death. The owner refuses to be comforted.

Evil does seem to be holding high carnival at our neighboring little town of Cromwell. There were several thefts some weeks ago, a notice of which appeared in these columns at the time, but here it late, things are again getting equally so much so that when the citizen of that usually quiet village retires at night he has no idea whether he will find his pants the next morning when he wakes or not. The Company Store was broken into last week and several things stolen. Some enterprising duck had ordered $25 worth of pistols, which were shipped by the River and the pistols being locked in the warehouse were stolen at night. And to pay for this same shipment the name of W. N. Martin was forged to a check. So far there is no clue, though some of the citizens believe that the whole list of outrages is the work of an organized band of thieves.

A Feminine Fend.

It has been several weeks since the male portion of the colored population had any trouble but the some what extended peace was broken Monday by two of the colored women, Ellen Lee and Ella Fleming at the home of the former. It was a lively setto but the Lee woman finally gained the advantage with the assistance of a healthy piling slat which she used with knockdown effect. The Lee woman was arrested and on Tuesday tried before Judge Carson and fined $5 and costs.

John H. Sparks' Colossal Shows will give two exhibitions in Hartford on Tuesday, July 17th. His big Circus comes highly recommended by the press. The Fultonian, of Fulton, Kentucky, says of the show:

"J. H. Sparks' Circus exhibited here on Tuesday. The afternoon session was well attended, there being such a crowd they could not seat them. This Circus is very popular on the peninsula, because of its freedom from vulgarity and gambling. Taken altogether it is the best thing that has ever been in the State for the money. They advertise what they do and do it. The managers are gentlemen in all respects and no town need hesitate to allow them to show within its borders. Everyone who attended spoke in glowing terms of the performance."

Owing to the general depression the price for adults will be 25 cents and for children under 12 years of age 15 cents.

The Division at Beaver Dam.

From all indications the proposed moving of the railroad shops and yards from Central City to Beaver Dam was a fake. But the extra west bound train leaving Beaver Dam at 7:10 a. m. and returning at 6:55 p. m. daily is retained by the company and is a very great convenience to the people not only of Beaver Dam but of Hartford and the whole western part of the county. The removal would have brought considerable property to the county, and an influx of immigration, but we can get along without it and not be in the least inconvenienced.

The Temporary Dam.

The petition referred to is the one prepared and signed by the citizens of Hartford week before last, playing the building of temporary dams at once. It is to be sincerely hoped that the matter may be pressed to a successful termination at an early day.

The K. of P. Entertainment.

The ice cream supper given under the auspices of Rough River Lodge No. 110 K. of P. Saturday night was a pronounced success. The members had prepared some of the finest cream that ever cooled the tongue of mortal man whether potentate or slave, and it was served in a manner such as K. P.'s alone know. The cake had been supplied by the K. P. ladies, and to say it was exquisitely fine is to do but half justice.

Nearly all the members of the local body with their wives, sisters or lady friends were present together with quite a number of invited guests. The Hartford String Band, composed of Messrs. M. Bean, R. Collins, Jesse Bean and Elvis Carson, rendered sweet music. The meeting adjourned at 11 o'clock and all expressed themselves as delighted with the evening's entertainment.

Among the visitors were Misses Annie Allen, Rosine; Henri Hammons, Horton; Alta Jenkins, Habitt; Ora Barnett, No Creek; Stella Bennett, Beda, and Messrs. C. W. Parratt and H. D. Hunt, Beaver Dam.

S. O. P. HALL

In the Meshes of the Law Charged with a Heinous Crime.

His 13 Year-old Step-daughter Swears Out a Writ for His Arrest.

MANY BELIEVE HIM INNOCENT.

The town was thrown into a fit of intense excitement Monday evening by the arrest of S. O. P. Hall on a writ sworn out by his thirteen year-old step-daughter, Nancy Jane Stevens, charging him with rape. The writ was issued from the Police Court but as one offense charged was committed in the country, the case was returned before Judge Morton and the bond placed at $1,000. In default of bail Hall hired some parties to guard him Monday night. The examining trial was begun Tuesday evening when the girl was introduced by the Commonwealth and told a very straight story, from which she could not be led by the counsel for the defense.

Hall engaged guard again for the night rather than go to jail, but about 9 or 10 o'clock he acted somewhat suspiciously as though preparing to escape and the fact was made known to the Court and he was ordered to jail. He had gone up stairs and put some papers, a large day book and a quantity of tobacco into his pockets, telling him that if he never called for it it belonged to the guard. These with other suspicious movements convinced all parties that he meant to be off.

He strenuously objected to going to jail and called several witnesses declaring his intention of bringing suit as soon as released.

This was about 10:15 Tuesday night and on Wednesday morning the trial continued and the defendant took the stand. Hon. E. D. Walker, attorney for the defendant, made a strong plea for the dismissal of the case on the ground of its improbability and the evident discrepancy in the statements of the girl. County Attorney Felix, for the Commonwealth, replied and called attention to the remarkable coincidence found in the statements of the girl and the defendant relative to the occasion last fall at Hall's home in the country, when the girl charges the offense was first committed.

The Court being satisfied held the prisoner under bond for the same amount as before—$1,000 to answer at the November Court and Hall went back to jail.

Hall's wife was a Daniel before her marriage to her first husband, Tom Stevens, and is the mother of several children by Stevens, who died several years ago and it is the youngest of these children, who is now the prosecutrix in witness against Hall, who was married to her mother some years ago.

The life of the family has been anything but pleasant and especially so in the last few months.

About the first or the middle of December last Hall came to town with his family and opened a butcher shop and grocery on the corner by Caselier & Burton's stable. A few months later he moved his grocery to the Collins property and his family lived up stairs. Here the unpleasant domestic life of the twain became more and more apparent to the public and not a few have been the red hot wordy battles waged in hearing of passers by.

It seems that on the day the writ was issued one of these fusillades had occurred. These facts, with other seeming ones, led many persons to believe that the prosecution was a malicious one and undertaken for the express purpose of getting rid of Hall. Color was given this, too, by his remark when arrested. Marshal Lyons served the papers and when the accused saw the status of things he merely remarked: "This is a damned trumped up thing from beginning to end." But the evidence brought out at the examining trial put another phase on the case and so the matter goes over until November.

Hall's grocery was locked up some weeks ago on an attachment, so it seems that there is no end to the poor man's troubles.

There was some talk of a mob from above town on Tuesday night to settle the whole affair, but none came and now no danger is expected.

CLEVELAND ROTTEN.

His Generosity to Carnegie Explained.

His $50,000 Campaign Donation in 1892 Turned Out to Be Worth $250,000 to the Homestead Works Now—Penalty for Fraud Cut Down.

What are the relations between the Carnegie Company and the Cleveland Administration that the former can turn the latter to such profitable account as to enable it to come out of the scandalous armor-plate affair but little damaged financially?

The question has been often asked since the exposure of the gigantic armor-plate frauds in which the Carnegie Company is so badly mixed up, but no answer has ever been found. When President Cleveland so generously cut down the penalty inflicted on the Carnegie Company for the armor-plate frauds and saved a matter of $250,000 to that favored concern, by reducing the amount of the fine imposed on the Company by the Government ordinance experts from $400,000 to $140,000, he simply paid a political debt to Andrew Carnegie and Henry C. Frick, contracted during the Presidential campaign of 1892, and this debt was in the shape of a contribution of $50,000 given by the Carnegie Company to aid in the election of Cleveland, according to a startling statement made to a reporter of this paper by a man who claims to speak from positive information upon the subject, and to utter, as he expressed it, "nothing but the truth."

"The Carnegie Steel Company," said the gentleman, "was a big contributor to the Cleveland campaign fund in 1892. The amount of its contribution was $50,000. This may astonish you. Indeed it is well calculated to astonish almost anybody to hear of a big highly protected Republican Manufacturing Company, like the Carnegie Company, chipping in so liberally to help elect a Democratic President, and the only deduction to be drawn from it is that the $50,000 was contributed for a purpose."

"The revelations in connection with the armor-plate frauds may show something of that kind. It was the biggest single contribution to the Cleveland campaign fund of 1892, but it has been repaid."

"Now, this is no wild statement I am making," continued the gentleman, "but gospel truth, and I know it for a certainty. There was no flourish of trumpets, no advertising, tall tale check to cause future fear and trembling when this big sum of money was paid into the Cleveland campaign treasury. It was turned over in cold cash and a receipt taken for it, which was signed by a New York man, who at that time was one of Cleveland's most trusted friends and closest advisers."

"Who was this confidential agent?"

"You will have to excuse me on that point."

"Well, who turned over the Carnegie donation?"

"I will tell you. The $50,000 did not find its way into the Cleveland campaign treasury through the regular channels by which contributions of that kind enter, but was paid in quietly by H. C. Frick to the man I have mentioned as having signed the receipt for it. Indeed it would not have been wise or prudent to have had it known that the Carnegie Company was contributing so liberally to the election of a Democratic President, particularly right on the heels of the big Homestead strike and riots, yet so fresh in the minds of the people of the country, so you see there was great need of the closest secrecy in the matter."

"Is it reasonable to suppose," said the gentleman, "that Andrew Carnegie, the iron king, the rankest kind of a protectionist, and the biggest beneficiary in the protection puddle, would suddenly change front, go clear back on the Republican party, and contribute $50,000 toward electing a Democratic President without expecting some benefit? It was a fine stroke of policy, as now appears, for in the day of Carnegie's trouble Cleveland turns up a timely and substantial friend?"

It is well known that Mr. Frick paid a quiet visit to New York just at the time when he is said to have paid over the $50,000 Carnegie contribution, and there was much speculation then as to the nature of the visit. This was in the fall of 1892. Shortly after Frick's return to Pittsburgh from that New York visit a rather vague rumor got abroad to the effect that he had, while in New York, made a personal contribution to the Democratic campaign fund, the amount being placed all the way up from $5,000 to 12,000, and the particular brand of politics to be indulged in by Mr. Frick was a subject of considerable discussion. However, he promptly denied the report and he was well within the truth in doing so, for if the story given above be true he had made no such personal contribution, but rather a $50,000 one for the company of which he is the managing director, and of course he was not called upon to enter either an affirmation or denial of it, so he didn't refer to it.

It was not an investigation of the scandal that has lately come out that was feared by the Carnegie Company, as much as an investigation into the armor-plate contracts for four or five years before, the administration of President Cleveland, when Wm. C. Whitney was Secretary of the navy. As stated before, the present armor-plate fraud is not the first of the kind the Carnegie Company has been involved in. On three different occasions within the last two years stories of fraud and cheating in the manufacture of armor-plate at the Homestead works have crept out and on investigation to have been true, but the details were carefully suppressed, although reported to the naval authorities at Washington.

In the spring of 1894 it was discovered by the Government armor-plate inspector at the Homestead steel works that interior and damaged plates were palmed off on the Government in a fraudulent manner. Some one had discovered the private mark which the inspector used in marking armor-plate that successfully passed suspicion, and which he thought was known only to himself, and it was placed on defective plate which he had previously rejected. By that means the defective plate was successfully shipped out of the yards along with the good plate to points where it was needed to go into new war ships that were being built for the Government. How much of this fraudulent armor-plate had been shipped before the discovery by the inspector was never known except by those engaged in it, but it was reported at the time, and never strongly denied, that large quantities of it had got out. It is known that one big shipment of it went to San Francisco for the war ship Monterey, then being built there, and that the defective plate had found its way into her sides. The truth of this was absolutely known at that time, yet nothing ever came of it, as the facts were quickly smoothed over.

This story of the $50,000 Carnegie contribution explains many things. Can it be wondered at now why Mr. Frick was in such haste to appeal from the decision of Secretary Herbert and the Government ordinance experts to President Cleveland, and why such leniency was shown by him to the Carnegie Company? People wondered at the many visits of Andrew Carnegie to President Cleveland last winter and the extremely and surprising friendly terms they were so suddenly on. Perhaps they will not wonder at it when they learn of this $50,000 donation.

A Wild Animal Farm.

ABOUT A DAY'S JOURNEY from the Setit River, which runs along the borders of Nubia and Abyssinia on the edge of the caravan road to Kassaia, the traveler finds nestled among the cocoanut and fruit palms a nameless village. Here is situated the wild animal farms belonging to foreign dealers.

When a white man decides to deal in wild beasts, he first obtains permission from the native chief to build a farm. For this he pays a price in silver, and he also makes many presents, consisting of gaily printed calicoes, colored glass beads, arms and ammunition to the chief and his family.

The chief then details the desired number of hunters and attendants for a stipulated time. Then the dealer buys the arms he needs, and also the necessary number of horses, camels and goats.

At one of the farms a thick bamboo hedge surrounds about two acres of ground. As the white traveler passes through the entrance he is greeted respectfully by two robust slaves, armed with modern rifles, their loins girded with palm-leaf matting. Within the enclosure are three huge buildings. There are also several huts scattered about, in which live the native hunters attached to the farm. All of them are slaves and the property of the native chief, in whose district the farm is situated.

The residence of the white men is a frame work of heavy bamboo sticks. The walls are made of heavy bamboo matting, and the roof is a thick covering of palm leaves. Fifty yards distant from the residence is the building where the young lions, elephants and hippopotami are kept. This structure is also made of bamboo frame work. The back and side walls are likewise covered with bamboo matting, but toward the court yard it is open and the sun is kept out by the overhanging roof of palm leaves.

The interior is divided into three compartments. The first contains a great number of cages made of timber and barred with iron for the reception of the young lions. The middle part contains a large basin of fresh water, surrounded by a sand-bank, around which, on the outer side, runs a high wire fence. The tank and the sand-bank are intended for the young hippopotami.

The rest of the building is divided into compartments similar to those in the horse stable and these are for the accommodations of the young elephants. Opposite this structure is a stable for the horses, camels and goats. It has no walls, but the interior is screened from the sun by palm leaves. On a well equipped farm there are generally three white men, one hundred and twenty hunters and attendants, seventy camels and about fifty goats. From these farms expeditions comprising twenty hunters, a sufficient number of attendants, ten camels and about a dozen goats to go out at regular intervals in the season of the year to hunt the beasts.

As the district between Nubia and Abyssinia is divided into two parts by the Setit River and on its fertile banks lions, elephants and hippopotami are found living close together over a comparatively small area. The lions roam the plain, the elephants live in the forests and the hippopotami wallow in the River or among the reeds on its banks. The Abyssinian hunters are as a rule brave fellows. It is next to impossible to capture alive a full grown elephant, a lion or a hippopotamus, and for this reason, partly, the young ones are always sought. Moreover some of the animals have to be carried bodily from their native wilds to the farm, as they stubbornly refuse to march, and it would not be so easy to carry grown up beasts.

When a herd of elephants is discovered on the swampy plains bordering the River—where "burra," a kind of African corn, grows in a lowly—the hunters ride up to them. An old bull, stationed some distance away from the herd, keeps watch, and at the slightest sign of danger gives a signal at which the whole herd immediately forms a battle phalanx, keeping the young ones in the rear.

The hunters on their horses approach the herd and then disappear. This is done several times until the elephants become angry, and then the stampede begins. Then the hunters, on foot, place themselves on the track of the animals and as they pass by try to hamstring as many as possible with long swords. This requires much skill and quickness, and the hunters are satisfied if they disable one of a herd.

The young elephants cannot run as fast as the old ones, but they follow on the trail. As the young ones pass, the hunters throw a lasso around him and then fasten him to a tree, where he is usually left for a day or two. When he becomes comparatively tame through over exertion and hunger he is thrown down and his legs and trunk are tied so he can do no harm. The hunters seldom succeed in lassoing more than one or two elephants during a single stampede.

Young lions are comparatively easy to capture, for old ones, owing to the impossibility of breaking them in are never caught.

When the natives discover a lion or lioness they trace it to its hiding place, sometimes it takes many days before they succeed in doing so. As a rule they know from the appearance and behavior of the beasts whether they have young ones or not.

If they find young ones among them they follow them for hours, keeping out of sight, hiding behind rocks or trees until they have an opportunity to shoot the old ones. The natives seldom miss their mark, but if they do, the old lion retaliates furiously, sometimes killing the daring hunter.

As soon as the old ones are dispatched the party approaches the den, and the struggle with the young animals begins. They are at first very savage and try to defend themselves by scratching and biting. When overpowered, their feet are tied with strong ropes, and they are placed in temporary cages.

During their transportation to the farm they receive little or no nourishment, but as soon as they become very hungry their temper gets better, and then they are given goats milk. On their arrival at the farm they are transferred to the proper cages.

The hippopotami, though endowed with jaws that can crush almost anything, are rather goodnatured and more easily captured than either the lion or the elephant. They live in great numbers in the Setit River and in the reed, along its banks, but hunting them is dangerous on account of the many crocodiles that infest the stream and are always ready for prey.

The young hippopotamus swims behind its mother and is playful. In order to capture it, the natives takes to their boats and try to kill the mother with rifles, but the hide is so thick and tough that a rifle ball will hardly penetrate it. At last, however, the mother is disabled and fatally wounded. The little one swims round and round, refusing to desert its dying parent.

At the most opportune time a native thrusts into the neck of the young hippopotamus a harpoon to which a rope is attached. Following the float the natives surround the young River horse when it lands. The wretched animal offers no resistance, but before it can be carried away a water buffalo has to be killed and skinned. The youngster is sewn up in the hide and transported to the farm. The animal often refuses food, and dies on its journey. If it can once be induced to take milk, however, it will continue to do so. When the young hippopotami arrive at the farm they are placed in separate cages.

Day and night the roars of the lions and the furious trumpeting of the elephants almost make the walls and roof tremble. On calm nights one can hear the cries and roars of the young captives for miles. The plaintive, passionate call of the young lions, as if they wanted their mother to come and take them back to their desert freedom, and the almost human crying of the little river horses, fill even the hearts of the natives with pity.

Sometimes, in response to the wailing of the young lions, a deep and angry roaring comes from some point near by. The old lion or lioness has followed close upon the heels of the captives, often hundreds of miles, and skulks about pining for its young till some friendly bullet ends its misery. If the elephants become very fractious, their rations are suspended until the pangs of hunger have broken their vicious tempers. The young hippopotami are of a more peaceful disposition, but they need the closest attention. It is almost impossible to make them take even goat's milk, and consequently many die.

Lions are shipped when six months old; hippopotami generally at the age of three months, as they are very heavy, their weight varying from 300 to 400 pounds, even at that age. Elephants almost invariably remain at the farm from twelve to eighteen months.

When the lions, hippopotami and elephants are ready to be shipped to America or Europe, a caravan is made up at the farm to take them to San-kin, on the Red Sea.

It is composed of about seventy camels, fifty goats, and one hundred and twenty men, in leading the white leaders. Two camels are needed to carry one cage containing two lions, and two more for a cage with one hippopotamus. Moreover, a large number of camels are loaded with food and water for man and beast on the journey.

The elephants are led, but as they are never put on the march until they have attained sufficient age and size, the journey does not exhaust them. All the traveling is done at night on account of the terrible heat, and the day is given entirely to rest.

The first station reached is Kassaia, about a week's journey from the farm. Here the caravan usually halts for two days to replenish provisions. The journey from Kassaia to San-kin, on the Red Sea, is extremely tedious and wearisome, for the road traverses a desert.

From Suakin the animals are shipped to Europe or America. Here the caravan is broken up. The natives are disbanded, and the white men depart for their own country to spend the six months of the so-called fever season, and do not return until that is over. During this time a trustworthy native takes care of the farm.

Elephants are now plentiful in the United States, and bring from three thousand to ten thousand dollars each. A good pair of lions may be bought for twenty-five hundred dollars; but hippopotami, always costly, are seldom sold now for less than seven thousand dollars apiece.

To restore gray hair to its natural color as in youth, cause it to grow abundant and strong, there is no better preparation than Hill's Hair Restorer.

AGE AND MARRIAGE.

The Girl of To-Day Weds at Earlier Twenty-five Than Eighteen.

The observant mortal must certainly have noticed among other things that the marrying woman of to-day defers her wedding until a much more advanced season in life than did her grandmother, or even the girls of a decade ago. The question arises, what is the cause of this putting off that time so many declare is the end of all women's existence?

Perhaps mothers are more sensible in these days and the young daughter is not thrown upon the world, either in a social or more workaday fashion, until she has had a thorough schooling, which means, in these days of long terms, a communion with books until she is over twenty-one. The girl herself may be wiser in her day and generation and realize that gayeties and the happy-go-lucky existence before marriage must of necessity come to an end when she is led to the altar.

Then, again, this is an age of independent women. They enter the field of labor with men and find in such occupation less time for sentiment than was allowed the lachrymose girl of the past. It is our earnest conviction that many girls have been led into the error of a foolish marriage through a lack of occupation. Busy, active, intelligent women have no time and less inclination for the making of romances. They are absorbed in art, in music, or in more hum-drum occupations that return an excellent remuneration and which they are too wise to give up until they are certain that the man who asks them is able to compensate for all that they put away for his sake.

Many a woman defers marriage because she feels that her duty lies at home in the care of an aged father or an invalid mother or helpless brothers and sisters who depend upon her alone for support. Perhaps some one argues that all this tends to the establishment of a vast spinsterhood, but let us whisper that after all when the right man comes along, when real love creeps into the heart, and wily Cupid makes his presence felt, then it matters not what specious argument may have been advanced heretofore, engagement and marriage appear to be the truest art and the noblest duty; for after all we are but women and are governed more by the heart than by the brain, independent and self-reliant though we think ourselves.—Philadelphia Times.

HORSE SENSE

IN A FEW WORDS.

Stubble April 8/94

"Ordinary" horses do not have the hardest pulling power I ever backed up against. Stubble's horse has pulled me up and down the hill for years and years and it took it no more effort. The draft is the hardest I ever saw. You can't get a better horse than Stubble's horse. It is extremely light making it very easy on horse flesh. Yours truly, J. H. H. H.

THE WORLD'S FAIR

Committee, who tested the McCormick No. 4 Steel Roller in the only regular exhibition field trials, in a heavy growth of timothy and clover, said, in their official report: "The efficiency of the machine is high, under fair conditions, nearly 70 per cent. Efficiency figures for ordinary mowers are at least twenty pounds higher in total draft, with a efficiency of not above 60 per cent., which latter figure good machines should be expected to exceed." The McCormick is the highest draft, and most efficient grass cutter yet produced. [Illustrated Model No. 4284]

McCormick Binders, Reapers and Mowers are built by the McCormick HARVESTING MACHINE CO., CHICAGO, and are for sale wherever grain or grass is grown.
